TEN DEAD, MANY HURT IN NEW YORK TENEMENT FIRE

Blaze Starts in Basement and Boars Up Through Building,
Cutting Escape.

CURRENCY IS DESTROYED

By Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Ten lives were lost and more than a score injured in a fire of unknown origin which practically destroyed a five-story tenement house on West 17th street before dawn today. Nine were burned and the tenth died in a fall from a ledge where he had clung until exhausted. Five bodies were found huddled together near a doorway on the fifth floor of the building and firemen later found three more bodies, one of which was identified.

Two men and one woman were seriously injured while 39 others were treated for abrasions and shock.

The building, a five-story tenement, was occupied by 16 families. Investigation showed the fire had originated in the basement and roared up through a shaft on the second floor where it unobstructed, spreading through the four upper stories of the building.

Many broke their way to windows where they clung to ledges and screamed for help. Postoffice employees from a sub-station across the street saved many before the firemen reached the scene. One man became exhausted while clinging to a window ledge and fell to the street, suffering a fractured skull.

Highly Prized Flag
British Emblem, Gift to Secretary Underwood, Flies with Old Glory.

Together with Old Glory, two Allied flags, those of England and France, flew at the Baltimore and Ohio Y. M. C. A. Armistice Day parade in Uniontown yesterday. There is some interesting history connected with the British emblem.

It is the property of Secretary W. P. Underwood and was received by him during the war, the gift of an old schoolmaster under whom Mr. Underwood studied in England. It is one of a pair of flags sent on the same ship. The other was presented to the school children of Washington, D. C., by the school children of London and in return an American flag was sent to the schools of the British metropolis.

Results Not Up to Expectations
But Satisfactory Consider-

Majority of Memberships Secured Are in the Dollar a Year Class; Effort to Be Made to Enroll Others in the Patron and Other Classes.

Returns made by the canvassers in the Red Cross membership drive which opened yesterday in this city reported to the auditor last night a total of 1,563 memberships, with a total of $2,136 in cash.

This is considered excellent for one day's work but is far below the hopes of the committee in charge. The drive opened at 2 o'clock and until 5 o'clock 125 eager workers covered the territory assigned to them. Team captains are charged with the responsibility of having their entire territory thoroughly covered before Thursday noon, when the campaign is to close.

The workers for the roll call met yesterday afternoon at the Baltimore & Ohio Y. M. C. A. preparatory to beginning their work. Team captains and canvassers were given final instructions by J. Fred Kuriz, chairman of the district, and E. T. Norton, Robert Norris and J. L. Evans, of the executive committee.

Much attention had been given to the details of the campaign and this careful planning resulted in the large number of memberships secured. Mr. Kuriz this morning said the Red Cross workers found in many instances persons who had always subscribed liberally to the cause were financially unable to do so this year and in some cases were needy. This, he declared, makes it necessary for those who are able to do so to increase their subscription.

The people of the city expected the workers, many remaining at their homes purposely until the canvassers had visited them. Before the campaign is closed the workers will report to the places where they were absent. Some also requested them to return at a later date.

The canvassers were cordially welcomed for the most part, there being very few cases of where their recognition was cool. One man reported, however, that a wealthy woman turning him down fairly, declaring that she had sympathy for the Red Cross or its work. She would not subscribe to even a $1 membership.

In four homes, workers reported, they accepted contributions of from 25 cents to 50 cents, the giving of this amount often being a sacrifice on the part of the donor. The spirit in which the money was offered was touching and only urged the canvassers on to greater effort.

At one home a woman offered 25 cents. Hanging to her apron as she stood in the doorway were three little children. Assurance that it was her earnest wish the money be accepted and the spirit in which it was given prompted the workers to accept the gift.

It is hoped that before the last reports are made on Thursday the canvassers will have secured a total of $3,000 in money and at least 1,800 to 2,000 memberships.

Workers are making endeavors to secure more memberships of the $5 and $10 class. Practically all of those reported yesterday were of $1.

The solicitors gave a button to each person purchasing a membership and the Red Cross flags were given at homes to be placed in windows. A number of families were reported to have 100 per cent membership in the organization. It is requested that all families taking out memberships display their window cards. This will not only serve to advertise the drive but will also indicate to workers that subscriptions have been secured in the residence. Workers needing supplies of any kind may secure them at the office of the Connellsville Steam Laundry company in East Crawford avenue.

BOTH HOPE AND ASSURANCE.

There is not only hope but also substantial reasons for believing that the limitation of armaments conference which began its sessions in Washington on Saturday, will make definite and certain progress toward the accomplishment of the purpose for which it was called by President Harding.

A war-weary world is impatient that something be done to stop the shameful waste of killing men. Reflecting this sentiment of the people's statesmen of all nations have indicated a willingness to take the necessary steps to inaugurate a movement that will lessen the burden of war preparedness which is weighing taxpayers down.

This being the temper and mood of the whole world the assembly of the conference could not have come at a more opportune time. Neither could it have commenced its deliberations under more auspicious circumstances.

The exercises attending the burial of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington cemetery on Armistice Day, and the magnificent address of President Harding upon that occasion and his to less sublime utterances at the opening of the conference, have paved the way for the direct and concrete fight for limitation of naval armaments which Secretary of State Hughes in his capacity as president of the conference, presented as the basis for deliberations of that body.

In his address before the conference, President Harding delineated in sharp clear outline the fundamental principles which should govern the action of the great international body which has the opportunity, power and duty to take the first step in the most momentous movement in the interests of peace the world has ever witnessed.

The following excerpts from the President's address show how broad is his conception of the duties of the conference as well as the unselfish motives
by which the United States is actuated in the premises.

"Here is a meeting, I can well believe, which is an earnest of the awakened conscience of twentieth century civilization."

"Speaking as official sponsor for the invitation, I think I may say the call is not of the United States of America alone; it is rather the spoken word of a war-weary world struggling for restoration, hungering and thirsting for better relationship of humanity yearning for relief and arming assurance of lasting peace."

"In soberest reflection the world's hundreds of millions who pay in peace and die in war wish their statesmen to turn the expenditures for destruction into means of construction, aimed at a higher state for those who live and follow after."

"We harbor no fears; we have no enemies to serve; we suggest no enemies; we contemplate not apprehend no conquest. Content with what we have, we seek nothing which is another's."

"The world demands a sober contemplation of the existing order and the realization that there can be no care-free world, but by one of us, but by all of us."

"No pride need be humbled, no haughty enmities nursed, but we have a message of peace, a message of hope, a message of assurance, a message of less preparation for war and more enjoyment of fortunate peace."

"Nothing can be accomplished in disregard of national apprehensions.
Rather, we should not together to remove the causes of apprehensions.
This is the first requisite toward the establishment of a permanent peace. Furthermore it reflects and confirms the fact that the United States stands ready and willing to go farther if necessary than any other nation in a practical application of the principles enunciated by President Harding."

"To put an end to incessant armaments and Mr. Hughes, and to seek the means of warding off the calamities which are threatening the whole world—such is the supreme duty which is today imposed on all states.

"The world looks to this conference to relieve humanity of the crushing burden created by competition in armament, and it is the view of the American government that we should meet that expectation without any unreasonable delay."

"I am happy to say that I am at liberty to go beyond these general propositions, and, on behalf of the American delegation, acting under the instructions of the President of the United States, to submit to you a concrete proposition for an agreement for the limitation of naval armament."

The proposition which Mr. Hughes submitted, providing for the abandonment of capital ship building programs, the scrapping of certain older ships, and the declaration of a 10-year naval holiday, was a bold and courageous move but it so convincingly reflects the attitude of the United States, and as so eloquently put, that already the British delegation at the conference has indicated its willingness to accept the American proposals with certain reservations and the Janese delegation has likewise declared it will accept the proposition
as a basis for negotiation.

That the conference has already made greater progress toward the attainment of a higher ideal in national relationship than was thought possible would be made even after weeks of deliberation, does more than better the hope that something real will be accomplished—it gives almost positive assurance that this gathering of world statesmen will be the instrument of that accomplishment.

Soldiers' Bonus
Approval

Pittsburgh Gazette Times.

The apparent overwhelming success of the soldiers' bonus proposal on which Ohio voters voted last Tuesday reflects, it is fair to assume, the popular attitude of Americans on the subject of additional recompense for the men who fought to the colors in the World War. If we remember correctly, every state in which a bonus proposition has been voted on has approved it. This makes a convincing answer to those who quote the legend that republics are ungrateful, applying it to the refusal of Congress to pass the bonus or adjusted compensation bill advocated by The American Legion.

It is regrettable that federal action, which we all feel will be taken, has to be postponed. A good many people will assert that if the states can make monetary provision for the former service men the federal government can.
But the cases are entirely different. Ohio, for example, the people having amended their constitution to authorize an issue of bonds for the soldiers' benefit, will make the payments gradually from the proceeds of securities sold as needed and the redemption of which will be spread over a long series of years. The taxpayers will not be subjected to any considerable additional burden in carrying the charges. Anyway, the people themselves have consented to the necessary taxations.

At Washington, on the other hand,
Congress is confronted with the necessity of providing through taxation for carrying an enormous war debt which already is irritating and burdensome. The public demand is for a scaling down of charges. To provide bonus payments for the approximately 4,000,000 defenders would require an immediate increase of taxation beyond the endurance of the people. At least, that is the way the national lawmakers and administrators regard the subject. That they are sympathetic with the desires of the former service men presages favorable action at the earliest moment it is feasible to comply.

CLUB WOMEN ACT AS MODELS, SHOW CORRECT IN DRESS

Sensible Creations for Females From Exhibited by Pittsburgers.

SIMPLICITY IS FEATURED

Nearly 150 Gathers in Hall at Mount Pleasant for Joint Meeting of Two Clubs at Which Mrs. Chester B. Storey of Pittsburg Is Speaker.

Special to The Courier

Mount Pleasant, Nov. 14.—The Saturday Afternoon club of Scottsdale and Mount Pleasant and the Fortnightly Musical club of Mount Pleasant jointly entertained 140 friends in the hall assembly rooms Saturday afternoon. Miss Edith Warden of the Mount Pleasant club introduced the first speaker of the afternoon, Miss Elizabeth Hood Latta, president of the Fortnightly Musical club. She gave an excellent talk on music, what it meant to the people, and what it was to be a member of the state federation. Following this she gave a recital, accompanied by Miss Edith Warden.

Following the recital Mrs. S. C. Stevenson, president of the Saturday Afternoon club, introduced Mrs. Chester B. Storey, dress economist, Pittsburg, who spoke on "As Others See Us," making the assertion that the clothes which she wears express the woman. Mrs. Storey said that there had never been a time when clothes were so beautiful as now. We are getting away from the extreme and grotesque, with simplicity and comfort as the predominant qualities of today's clothes which express the freedom of thought and action of the day.

Mrs. Storey particularly emphasized the fact that every woman can be well dressed if she buys intelligently. Mrs. Storey appeared as a perfect example of her subject. To show just what was being worn Mrs. Storey had appeared as models properly clothed.

Mrs. C. Campbell of Scottsdale in an attractive dress and hat and suit combined with half and scarf to match; Mrs. Floyd P. Daise of Scottsdale in a very simple dress yet carrying so much style one could wear it at a matinee; Miss Sara Horner in a sport skirt and sweater as the sports girl, laying stress on the fact that Miss Horner wore a waist under the sweater, which is correct; Miss Martha Stoner in an afternoon dress cut along the Grecian lines; Miss Ola Stoner, in one of the newest jacket suits, trimmed in fur; Miss Catherine Matthews in an evening dress with a high collar and cuffs and introduced the new female gloves.

Following this refreshments were served.

Children's Party.
A birthday party was held in honor of the fifth birthday anniversary of Sara L. or Colman at her home in Eagle street. Saturday afternoon twenty of her little friends spent the afternoon playing games. Eleanor Colman and Mildred Starnes assisted the hostess.

Dramatic Gun Accident.
L. E. Davis was brought to the Memorial hospital Saturday for treatment of a slight flesh wound in the left leg. Mr. Davis, who is a son of Dr. L. E. Davis of Pittsburg, was looking over a gun while driving a car and accidentally shot himself and burned his left little finger. He is not seriously injured.

Club Entertained.
Mrs. Robert Shuman entertained the members of the Far-of-Park club at her home in College avenue Saturday evening.

GETTING RID OF A NASTY TEMPER

How Guido's Pepsito-Mangan Relieves Ill Humor of Bad Health.

When ill humor becomes chronic and a man or a woman who should be genial becomes known as a "grouch," nine times out of ten the cause is physical. When blood gets weak and full of poison it leaves the body weak, the face pale, and causes a tired feeling. There is no endurance. Nerves get all shattered because in a weak-blooded condition the body is not nourished sufficiently with the oxygen that rich red blood supplies. Guido's Pepsito-Mangan is a blood-builder and when taken in steady doses for a while it causes a flood of fresh red blood cells to a room through the body, bringing robust health and strength. With good blood, rich and red, there are no grouches. Life looks good and pleasures are keenly enjoyed. Prudential have Guido's Pepsito-Mangan in liquid and tablet form. Be sure to get the genuine with the name "Guido's Pepsito-Mangan" on the package.—Advertisement.

THE SOISSON.

"NOT GUILTY," the feature picture today tomorrow and Wednesday is a First National production featuring Bill Hail. The story is pulsating drama. Paul Elliott, the son of wealthy parents, while supervising railroad tracks, is the heart of the Adirondacks, has met and fallen in love with Eliza Chetwood. While out riding Eliza's horse is started by the shock of an explosion and bolts. Paul spins his horse after her and just catches up with Eliza as her horse plunges over the cliff. He snatches her from the saddle and as she lies in his arms with closed eyes he talks feverishly to her of his love. She becomes conscious of what he is saying and pulls away from him, telling him that she is already engaged to be married. Paul returns to the bungalow where his mother and sister are, and as he enters finds his twin brother there. Arthur tells Paul he is fleeing from justice having murdered a man. Years previously, when the two were lads, Paul accidentally shot his brother Arthur, had been operated on the doctor warned them that it might leave an intermittent weakness in the boy's mind. Paul, remembering, decides that he is responsible for what has now happened and changes places with Arthur. Then what happens is a question that will rival that famous problem of a generation ago, "The Lady of the Tiger".

THE PARAMOUNT.

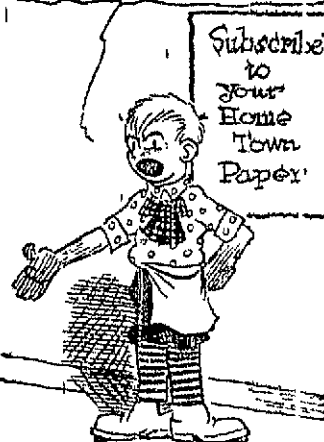

"THE SINGLE TRACK" with Corinne Griffith in the stellar role is the feature attraction today and tomorrow. The picture takes its title from a spur of a railroad that when completed will connect the two halves of the continent, all that remains of a vast fortune, with the main line. It must be finished before the option of the right-of-way expires. Rival interests employ foul means to cause delays and the fast young mine owner goes to her property personally to take charge. The picture is spectacular to a degree. For over a month more than 200 workmen were building a half-mile single track spur on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad in the Catskills near Archville and a high trestle over a river. As soon as this was completed the scenes were shot of the trestle and a portion of the track destroyed by dynamite just after a locomotive, driven by the heroine, passes in safety. There are several other big scenes, equally as spectacular in the production. Miss Griffith has an excellent supporting cast headed by Richard Travers.

INGROWN TOE NAIL TURNS OUT ITSELF

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outigo" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the nail that it can't penetrate the flesh and the nail turns naturally outward almost overnight. "Outigo" is a harmless, antiseptic, manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.—Adv.

TAKES CARE OF 5 CHILDREN

Mrs. Taylor's Sickness Ended by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Roxbury, Mass.—"I suffered continually with backache and was often dependent upon my maid. At my monthly periods I was almost impossible to keep around at my work. Since my last baby came two years ago my back has been very sore and no condition could get in would relieve it and doctor's medicine did not help me. After reading the recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have found great relief since using it. My back is much better and I can now do my work at home and have the care of five children as my work is very trying and I am very thankful I have found the Compound and such a help. I recommend it to my friends and if you wish to use that story I am very glad to help any woman suffering as I was until I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. MAUDE E. TAYLOR, 5 St. James Place, Roxbury, Mass.

Backache is one of the most common symptoms of a displacement of the uterus and the female system. No woman should make the mistake of trying to overcome it by heroic endurance, but profit by Mrs. Taylor's experience and dry Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Others include Puller, McElfish, Charles Kent, Sidney Herbert, Edward Norton, Matthew Davis and Jessie Stevens. Webster Campbell directed the production, which is based on a novel by Douglas Grant.

THE ORPHAN.

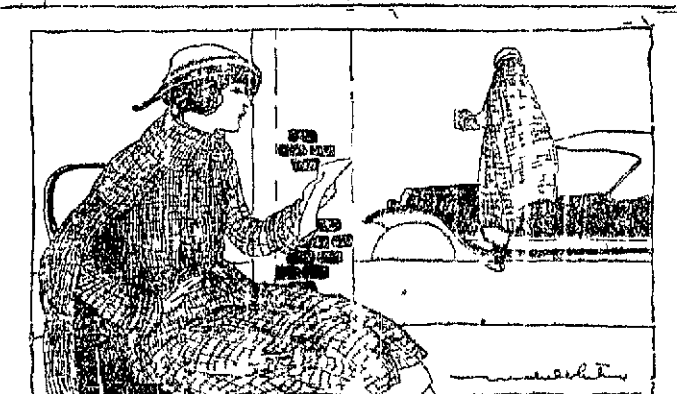

"IDOLS ON CLAY," a romance embracing all of life and weaving it into love, opened today for a three-day performance at this theatre. Beautiful Mae Murray and David Powell, who had so much to do with the wonderful success of "On With the Dance" and "The Right to Love" are the featured players in "Idols on Clay." The remainder of the cast is of the same excellent caliber. "Idols on Clay" brings together on a South Sea Isle a young London sculptor who falls in his career and in man kind scattered by an unscrupulous woman, has drifted to this tropic.

Banner Boxing Program Of Season Arranged for Tonight at Slavish Hall

Billy Carter and Tommy Phillips Meet in Star Bout of 10 Rounds.

OTHER HIGH CLASS ONES

PROGRAM

First Bout, Six Rounds.
Jackie Fromme vs. Jimmy Clayton.
Starts at 8:30 P. M.
Second Bout, Six Rounds.
Jimmy Moore vs. Johnny King.
Semi-Final, Six Rounds.
Johnny Pollock vs. Johnny Fandy.
Star Bout, 10 Rounds.
Tommy Phillips vs. Billy Carter.
Referee, Bernie Stillwagon.

Everything is in readiness for the banner boxing show of the Payette Athletic Club tonight at Slavish hall. The star bout of 10 rounds will bring together Billy Carter, the heavy-hitting colored boy of this city and Tommy Phillips of McKeesport. This bout will decide the logical boy to meet Johnny Donnelly. Phillips on Friday night in Pittsburgh defeated Young Goldie, who boxed at the last show of the local club. His victory over Goldie gives Phillips 11 straight wins and the local youth, Carter, will have to step at his very best to gain a verdict over the visitor.

Carter has rounded into the best condition of his career. In fact he is better today than when he defeated Johnny Kirk in one round several years ago. Billy can hit. Very few of the boys that Tommy has met recently pack such a healthy wallop as the local product. The bout should prove to be above the average.

The agreement calls for the boys to weigh in at 133 pounds. Carter is 145 and as strong as ever. The semi-final between Johnny Pollock, the Dawson sensation, and Johnny Fandy, the A. E. F. feather-weight champion, is on a par with the main encounter. Pollock has trained faithfully for the bout, working out with Carter and other sparring partners.

The result of this contest will have a bearing on Pollock's future in the ring, as the Dawson youngster has had 32 straight battles and should be hand Pundy the wrong end of the decision it will mean that Pollock steps out into that company.

Two preliminaries will center through six rounds each. In the opener Jackie Fromme, the popular little flyweight, will meet a tatter in Jimmy Clayton or the North Side. Pittsburgh. Clayton is traveling fast and will make Fromme feel his highly vaunted skill. The second number will flash Jimmy Moore of Pottsville and Johnny King of Fayette City. Matchmaker Duke Barry predicts that this contest will give any bout on the card. These two boys are veteranweights and one of the best contests ever seen at the local club is sure to result when these two boys go to it.

Bernie Stillwagon will make his debut as a referee. Bernie should prove to be a most satisfactory official as he is a close student of the game and knows all its angles.

The first bout will start promptly at 8:30 o'clock. Reserve and ring-side tickets will remain on sale at the West Penn-Billboard and the Royal hotel until 8 o'clock. The ticket office will close at Slavish hall at 7:30 sharp to relieve the congestion at the two agencies handling the advance sales. Many out of town followers of the boxers on the card will make the trip to witness what may be truly termed the best all-around boxing show ever put on here.

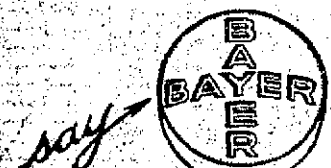

Tornadoes Will Play Greensburg Here On Friday

The Tornado football team, Conneltsville's strong undefeated independent players, has finally secured a game with South Greensburg, one of the teams which must be defeated to give the locals standing in the Pittsburgh Post championship tournament. The game will be played here Friday afternoon.

The Tornadoes had the Greensburg was scheduled for two weeks ago but the Westmoreland county team called off the contest because of a previously scheduled one it was unable to engage.

The greatest fighting qualities of the locals have as yet been untapped. The Truckeeville outfit, not last Friday, was expected to be its equal but such was not the case. Fans are hoping South Greensburg will be able to stand the pace.

High school finishes its season at home. A game will be played here Saturday and the final on Thanksgiving.

Many local persons witnessed the Pitt-W. & J. clash at Pittsburgh Saturday. The field was a big mud puddle but despite this both outfits played great football. A forward pass, from Breaker to Pop, with the latter standing on the 10 yard line alone in the dual quarter, gave Wash-Jeff the score, and Russ Stein made it safe when he booted the goal from field. The game was won, 7-0.

The chief sporting event today is the fight card arranged by the Fayette Athletic association for tonight.

TORNADOES 215 POINTS, OPPONENTS, 0

The Tornadoes have made a wonderful football record. To date five games have been played, four at home. The locals' goal line has not been crossed once and four of the games have been won by very decisive scores. Only one team, the Hill Top Y. M. C. A. of Pittsburgh, held the Tornadoes to two touchdowns.

The total of points made by the team is 215 and no opponent has yet crossed the Brown and White 25-yard line.

FIND SECRET OF FINE TONE

Old Man Discovers That Yodels of Eggs and Boeswax Were Used in Filler of Violin.

N. C. Holcomb, musical instrument maker of Newry, O., believes he is making rapid advances in his efforts to discover the secret of the finest low tone of the Cremona violins. Musicians for years have wondered why many old Italian violins apparently made in a slipshod manner should produce such clear sounds, says Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Holcomb believes that the lost secret had to do mainly with the filler and varnish. Not long ago he was informed that a careful chemical analysis had been made of some of the fiddles on old violins owned in the city of Cremona.

This examination disclosed the fact that before the varnish was applied the wood was filled evidently with the yolk of an egg and boeswax. Profiting by this information, Holcomb rubbed these substances into the new wood of a new violin before applying the varnish. The results were surprising, the instrument producing a tone that is usually associated with age.

Temptation to Sheriff. "Did you take those bloodhounds in the old days when you toured the country with an 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' show?"

"No," said the veteran actor. "We carried Great Danes or mastiffs, as they were large and fierce looking animals. Besides, it wouldn't have been good policy to have real bloodhounds that might have been useful to a sheriff if he attached them."

Birmingham Age-Herald.

"Jack says she is all the world to him."

"Well, Jack's world seems to be still in the glacial period, that's all I've got to say."—Boston Transcript.

TWO BIRDS AND CAT WIN FIGHT WITH COBRA

Feline Is Deciding Factor in Battle With Reptile That Attacks Nest.

An extraordinary story of the fight of a cobra with two birds and a cat is told by a Madras correspondent in The London Daily Express.

The man was sitting in his compound, reading, when he was disturbed by a pair of green birds chirping, as if in distress, and wheeling and darting violently. These birds had their nest in a low thorn tree close by, and at the foot of the tree a huge cobra was coiled, evidently bent on capturing the birds' eggs.

Every time the snake made an attempt to climb the green birds swooped on its head, which it was obliged to hide for fear of being its eyes.

Then a cat, which had been watching, advanced to the attack. As she drew near the cobra became aware of her and reared up to his full height, with hood expanded, and struck out with a hideous hiss, only to meet the ground, for the cat, side-stepped lightly, and before her opponent had time to withdraw his head, scored a hit with her paw.

The enraged cobra hissed and struck again, and again, only to be rewarded each time with a nasty scrape from the cat's claws.

Suddenly the cobra bent a hasty retreat, with the cat in hot pursuit, and the correspondent was able to get his twelve bore into action, reducing the snake to a heap of writhing coils.

This sounds like a fish story, and it is a fish story, and the fish isn't got no tail, and the photo proves it, and you can call it any old name you darn please and get away with it: Sam Moore of San Francisco caught it.

This fish has skin like a shark, a mouth like a sole, spike-like fins that protrude perpendicularly from its body and its back, its eyes are about the size of a salmon's, and, unlike most habitants of the sea, it has no scales.

QUIT MEAT IF YOUR KIDNEYS ACT BADLY

Take Tablespoonful of Salsa If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative system clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like jumps of lead, and you have itching pains in the back as the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of J. B. Kurtz' Salsa.

A tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salsa is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in uric acid, to loosen and remove the stones, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jud Salsa is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink; and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.—Advertisement.

a schoolboy, a man who said he was Edward Pierson, thirty years old, a merchant of New York, was sentenced to 15 days in jail.

Frank Belvaire, fourteen, told the magistrate he was playing with other boys when Pierson asked him and shook the powder down his back. The boy said the powder immediately made him squirm.

Pellemea McGrath told the magistrate for three weeks complaints had been made that a man of Pierson's description had thrown an itching powder on the backs of their daughters in the streets.

"What have you to say about this boy's charge?" asked the magistrate of the prisoner.

"I am guilty, your honor," replied Pierson. "But I was only fooling."

"You have a queer sense of humor," commented the magistrate.

HOARD OF GOLD IN INN

Discovered During Structural Alteration in Once Popular Tavern.

A hoard of gold and copper coins, some dating back more than 100 years, has occurred during structural alterations which are being made at the White Lion Inn, an old hotel, in the ancient abbey village of Upholland in England. An old fireplace in the dining of the inn has been taken down and gold sovereigns and half-sovereigns of various dates—one of 1890 and another of 1855—have been found in the rubbish heap that has been carted from the inn to a place called the dingle, where such debris is tipped.

A little girl playing in the dingle found the first "yellow" sovereign, as she called it, and people with apes dug up others. All sorts of romantic stories are being woven about the secret hoard, but its origin is unknown.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dizziness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "low" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

The GIRL HORSE AND A DOG

By FRANCIS LYNDE

COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

Two possibilities suggested themselves. A siphon, a big pipe, starting at the bottom of the shaft and leading out over the top and down the mountain to a point lower than the shaft bottom, would do the work. It was, of course, automatically discharge a stream of its own bigness, whatever that should be. But the cost of over a mile of such pipe was beyond my means; and if two six-inch pumps driven night and day had failed, to make any impression upon the flood, that could be expected of a siphon which, in the nature of things, could be much bigger than an ordinary water main.

The other possibility was even less hopeful. It was the driving of a short tunnel, which Daddy and I might undertake without additional help, from the level of the high bench straight to an intersection with the mine shaft. This, I estimated, might tap the water at a point possibly twenty feet below the present level in the shaft. Its success, I saw at once, would depend entirely upon the accuracy of the measurements of the underground lake which was supposed to be supplying the flood. If this reservoir were shallow and high in the mountain, the short tunnel might drain it. If it were deep and low, nothing would be accomplished.

The question was still hanging heavily upon my mind when I made my way around to the mine buildings by the left-hand gulch path, sneaked in and began to sneak myself into Daddy's extra pair of overalls; just for what, I hadn't the least idea; only I needed to be doing something to keep me from getting completely dotty in the growing contest.

By this time, as I knew, they would be getting up from breakfast in the cabin across the dump head, which would most likely be Bullerton's cue to come over and ride me some more. When I looked out in sour anticipation, here he came, smoking one of his high-priced cigars and swaggering a bit, as he always did in walking.

"This is your thirty-thousand-dollar car, Broughton," he tossed at me, as soon as he stepped over the threshold of the shaft house door; but I fanned I could notice that some way, he didn't seem quite so chipper and careless as he had the day before.

"See here," I ripped out; "what's the use? You can't buy this mine at any price! It's not in the market and it isn't going to be. Not in a thousand years!"

"But see here: What's the use of butting your head against a stone wall? You're stuck, world without end, and you know it. This flooded hole in the ground is of no more use to you than a half of spectacles to a blind man!"

"Perhaps it is," I retorted, "but this mine, I guess, I can keep it as a souvenir if I feel like it, can't I?"

"Oh, h—!" he grunted, and turning on his heel went away.

After he had gone I patted myself on the back a bit for not losing my temper; and then, just to have an excuse for staying away from the cabin and the Bullerton vicinity, I made a dash into the boiler and got up steam. In the former, pumping spent Daddy and I had operated only the two centrifugals, ignoring the deep-well pumps designed to lift additional water from the lower levels of the mine.

Just to try something that we hadn't tried before, I got stern on the deep wells, and soon found that the machinery, which we hadn't taken down in the general overhauling, needed tinkering before it would be safe to run it. Bunking the boiler fires, I went at the job single-headed and managed to wear out the living day at it.

I took me all the afternoon and the some to get the machinery cleaned and oiled up, and reassembled. In passing over the boiler in the afternoon, we had found an acetylene flare torch and a can of carbide and I figured the torch so that I could go on working after dark.

It was about nine o'clock when I got the deep wells ready to run and headed up the fire and turned the steam on. In a few minutes the car, which had been taken to provide a discharge outlet for the centrifugals, the Cornish pump had merely an iron trough which ran to a ditch leading down to the bench below the mine buildings. After a few minutes of the clanking and banging, the water began to come. It was horribly smelly stuff, thick and discolored; evidence sufficient that it was coming from the bottom of the mine. The two pumps together were lifting about an eight-inch stream, and it occurred to me at once that if I could get the centrifugals going at the same time, as was an attack might accomplish what the piece-meal assault couldn't.

Throwing in the clutch that drove the big rotaries, I ran up against what Daddy would have called a "circumstance." There wasn't power enough to drive both sets of pumps coupled together, at least not with the steam pressure the boilers were carrying. Thinking to get more power by pulling the fires a bit harder, I went to the detached boiler room to stoke, leaving the deep wells clanking away in the shaft house. I had fired two of the furnaces and was at work on the third when a series of grinding noises in the machinery sent me flying to find out what was going wrong.

What was happening—what had happened—happened as plenty. As I got to the great Cornish water, a little was driven through a train of gears. When I reached the scene, the steam engine was still running smoothly, but the pumps had stopped. The reason didn't have to be looked for with a microscope. The gear-train was a wreck, with one of the wheels smashed into bits, and half of the cogs stripped from its mesh-mate, it being what you'd call it.

Mechanically I stopped the engine and went to view the remains. The deep-wells were done for—there was no question about that; they'd never run, again until a new set of gears should be installed. That much determined, I began to look for the cause of the calamity. Naturally, I supposed that a cracked cog in one of the wheels had given way, and with this for a starter, the general smash would follow as a matter of course. But a careful and even painful scrutiny of the wreckage failed to reveal the cog with the ancient fracture. Each break was now and fresh and clean; there wasn't a sign of an old flaw in any one of the mesh-mates.

I think I must have knelt there under the gear train for a half-hour or more, handling the fragments of iron and fitting them together. It was like a child's broken-block puzzle, and after a time I was able to lay all the larger bits out upon the floor in their proper relation to one another. It was in the ground-up debris remaining that I found something which suddenly made me see red. Battered into shapelessness, but still clearly recognizable, were the crushed debris members of one of the much-shouted-for.

I tried not to go off the handle in a fit of mad rage. With a sort of forced calm, I considered every beam and projecting timber where I might incautiously have left the wrench, and from which it might have jarred off to fall into the gears. There was no such chance. I had used the wrench in re-assembling the machinery, but now that I came to recall all the circumstances, I distinctly remembered having put it, together with the other tools, on the little work bench back of the engine. The alternative conclusion was, therefore, fairly inevitable. While I was firing the furnaces, somebody—undoubtedly somebody who had been watching for the opportunity—had taken advantage of the moment when my back was turned and had thrown the wrench into the gears.

It was the final straw. There was only one person on the Cornish reservation who could have any motive for wrecking my machinery; and while I was banking the fires and setting things in order for the night, I chartered my course, as the navigators say. The dawn of another day, I told myself, would schedule the ultimate limit. Unless he should prove to be a good bit quicker with his gun than I was with my fists, Bullerton was due to get the man-handling he seemed to be seeking for; and beyond that, he'd quit his job, and I should be able to tell him on his horse and dog the honest half-way to Atropia.

It was with this most unchristian design, seething and boiling in my brain that I finally went over to the cabin, let myself in, and climbed stealthily up the lock ladder to my blankets, and the next thing I knew, it was broad daylight, the sun was shining in at the little window over the head of my bunk, and from the kitchen at the rear a juicy and most appetizing odor of frying ham was wafting itself up through the cracks in the unkindled walls of my cabin.

CHAPTER XI.

An Arched Bath.

It's an old saying that coming events have a knack of foreshadowing themselves. While I was struggling into my clothes and reviving last night's determination to have it out with Bullerton the minute I should lay eyes upon him, it struck me all at once that the house was curiously quiet. To be sure, somebody was stirring and the breakfast was cooking, but the impression that something had happened was strong upon me when I descended the ladder.

In the living room I found a mighty soggy-faced old Daddy putting breakfast on the table.

"Sit just you and me for it, this mornin', Stanale," he muttered, laying plates for two; and his mild old eyes looked as if they were about to take a bath.

"What?" I exclaimed. "Has Bullerton gone?"

"Uh-huh; bright and early—fore day, I reckon; leastwise, I didn't hear him when he went."

"But where's Jennie? She isn't sick, is she?"

He shook his head dolefully. "No; she—she's gone, too."

"Not with Bullerton?" I gasped.

"I sure does look that way, Stanale. She left a 'N' note on the table for me, a-tellin' me not to worry none, and sayin' I needn't look for her till I saw her again."

At first I could hardly believe my own ears. It was so incredibly out of keeping with Jennie as I had been identifying her.

"Are you going after them?" I demanded.

"What for?" was the despondent query. "Takin' a morsel of use, any way you look at it. Jennie's a woman, and she don't have to have the old daddy say she can, 'r she musn't. Besides, they was probably pichin' out to catch one of the early trains—there's one each way, east and west—and them trains 've been gone a couple of hours."

Daddy had done his best with the breakfast, but I don't recall any meal of my life that ever came so near choking me. I told Daddy about the smashing of the machinery, and the proof I had that it had been a piece of sabotage.

"Reckon maybe he allowed you'd find out he done it and try a dog-fall 'r somethin' with him to pay him back?" Daddy queried.

"I don't know," I confessed. "I went on eatin' in silence, or rather trying to eat, and turning over the puzzling and bad-tasting questionings in my mind. How could Jennie go off with Bullerton, knowing him to be the scamp he was? And why, if she had been meaning all along to do this thing, had she blocked his game by telling me that I wasn't to tell him the Cornish?"

It was in the midst of these reflections that I chanced to feel in the coat pocket where I had been carrying the deed turned over to me by Daddy Hiram; and for the reason I state that morning I nearly choked. The pocket was empty!

"What's hit you now, son?" Daddy inquired; seeing my jaw crop, I suppose.

"The last thing there was in the box that could fall out of my coat," I gasped. "Bullerton has stolen my deed to the Cornish!"

"The mischief he has! Plum sure you hadn't lost it out of your pocket?"

We made sure, without the loss of a moment; looking in my life sleeping place and in the mine buildings. The deed was gone, safe and sound, and we both agreed that Bullerton had had plenty of chances to steal it. Wearing overclothes while I was working about the machinery, I had often left my coat hanging in the cabin. As a matter of fact, I hadn't worn it at all on the previous day.

"Well, Daddy," said I, after the prolonged search had proved futile, "where does this leave me?"

Thrashing the facts out, we soon found where it left me. A grandfather Jasper, as you may remember, had no notion of the matter or, indeed, of any legacy to me in his will as it had been probated; there was no need of it because he had already decided the Cornish to me, and at the time of his death it was no longer among his assets. Moreover, his lawyer had told Bullerton (according to Bullerton's story told me in the Pullman smelter) that the 'e was no record of any mining transaction whatever in his papers. Therefore, in the absence of the memorandum which my grandfather had given Cousin Perry—and which Perry had dutifully carried with him to Cornish—there was nothing but the deed to show for my ownership; absolutely nothing.

At that, the loss of the deed wouldn't have been fatal if the document had been properly recorded. It hadn't been. And now, with the unrecorded deed gone, there was nothing to prove that I had ever owned the Cornish. The loss was total—with no insurance.

Daddy Hiram was shaking; his head sorrowfully after we had run this last bunch of straw through the threshing machine.

With things looking as blue as the bluest whetstone that ever clicked upon scythe, we tried to settle upon some line of action. Copah was the county seat, and the obvious first step would have been for me to go there, for a search in the county records for evidence of the sale of the mine to my grandfather. But the minute I should show myself on the railroad, I'd be nabbed for the theft of that infernal inspection car. Daddy offered to go in my place, but that alternative didn't appeal to me at all. I knew perfectly well how helpless he'd be in any such law-suit, and he'd be sure to be made in the county recorder's office.

Being stopped off short in every other direction, we finally gravitated over to the shaft-house and went to work in an aimless sort of fashion galling up the wreckage of the design gear train and putting things shipshape again. With steam up, we turned the machinery over a few times, just to see that everything was in working order again, and I threw in the clutch of the centrifugals, merely for the satisfaction of hearing the flood rushing through the outlet. When the pumps were going at full speed I went to look down the shaft. As before when we had run the pumps for a week on end, there was a slight disturbance of the water, but nothing more. My makeshift float-and-pulley gauge showed no change in the level.

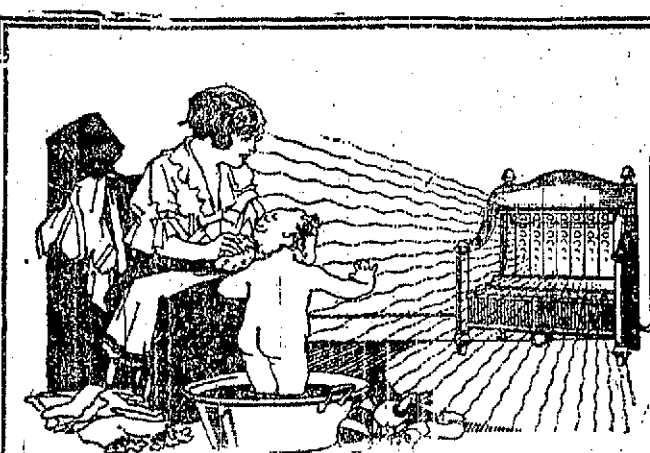

Suddenly a frank notion seized me that I'd like to know just what was going on down in those black depths into which the suction pipe of the big pumps led.

PARIS ADOPTS LONGER SKIRTS

Ten Inches Favored for Suits, With Dressy Frock Touching the Floor.

SLEEVES MUCH IN LIMELIGHT

Arm Covering Beautiful and Wonderful to Behold—Loose and Wrappy Coats Are Favored—Evening Gowns Are Draped.

Paris needs us beauty in the ways of fashion for 1921 that surpasses even her previous efforts, observes a fashion writer. The designers there in the heaven of good dressing have created costumes and coats and suits to rival even their own efforts of the past.

The word is that there is nothing radically different, and yet each thing is so different in itself that it deserves a paragraph—a eulogy—all its own. The Parisian designer cannot repeat himself. His every effort is a distinct achievement, and the French gowns that are shown for this season only serve to accentuate that fact. One can look at them forever and not run the risk of being bored by any bald repetition.

But as for the points of style. Yes, there are these in some abundance, and when one starts to assemble them one finds that they are much more numerous than they promised to be.

The skirts are longer. That in itself is an established fact. Some of the designers have chosen to have the suit skirts at a moderate length, say ten inches from the floor, but the more dressy frock, the longer it grows, until we find them for evening touching the floor in some few cases. However, if it is smart, it is long.

Sleeves Are Much Longer.

Then, to follow the lines of the drooping skirts, every other line, by force of suggestion, has also taken a drop. There are the sleeves. They are much longer, and they are broader, too, just as the skirts have taken to themselves more fullness.

Sleeves, in fact, are the sensation of the season. We hardly expected them to be. We had looked to skirts to provide the thrill of change, but here are the sleeves most beautiful, most wonderful to behold. Dressmakers and designers had had a rest from sleeves for some time, so they came back to the problem with a zeal that shows itself gloriously in the things they have put before the public. And the women who love to dress—they, too, come back to sleeves with enthusiasm, glorying to show the graceful sweep of their arms by the whirl of the clinging trailing sleeve. Being to feel the immensity and wrapfulness of the extra folds about their arms.

Sleeves are trimmed and trimmed in many different ways. There are heavy shirings on full foundations and there are wavy lines of tulle applied to heavier materials. There are sleeves of alternating stripes running across.

Model in Black Velours de Laine; Trimmings of Steel Embroidery and Gray Lamb.

wise and those where the stripes run lengthwise. But the most amusing sleeveless of all are those that are made of materials quite contrasting to the gown themselves—brilliant sleeves of flowing graceful lines attached to frocks of neutral tone. Just as we expect to see brilliancy of color worked into a bolt or a grille, so we are having it this season flashing from the sleeves. It is a new note and one that is quite satisfyingly becoming.

Loose and Wrappy Coats.

Paris has a feeling for loose and wrappy coats worn with dresses to harmonize or to match exactly. This fashion, she declares, is one that is so really feminine that for beauty and charm it can find no equal. When they make suits over there they employ more or less trimming, making them look as much like street dresses as they do like tailored suits. They call them tailcoats, but they bend every effort to take any hardness of a tailored look away from them.

The dresses among the Paris showings are inclined, as a class, to have long waists, again preventing the harmony of long lines. The French dresses blouse over the hips at a low line, which, a year ago, we would have believed impossible to wear. But they have done it and done it well and it is really surprising how becoming the longer waistline, not to mention a bulging waistline, can be. Even on the evening gowns the waistline is accentuated by thick and protruding trimmings. One no longer makes a fetish of the fairy waistline, but one adds on interminably with no thought

The evening gowns are draped and draped again, with one portion of the drapery chattering another portion.

Gray Caracul and Blue Velours Are Used for the Construction of This "Tailcoat."

They look always as though the maker had revealed in the draping of the fabrics and as though she had let her whim carry her along as she pinched and shaped.

Make the Lines Long. So, Paris says, for these new gowns and coats and wraps and suits make the lines long and the figure tall, and to gain this effect use every trick and device known to the dressmaker's art. Even the collars are high and tight to add to the general lengthening scheme. And the hats, too, are kept to go straight into the air in another elongated line.

Color is rife among the winter things, for Paris seems to have broken away from the leading spell of black and still more black. Many of their models are, of course, in black, but that somber tone is not entirely prevalent, and we see many of the fur-trimmed shades, with a decided leaning toward all of the shades of violet used either alone or in combination with other colors. The tans and gray shades are still good, and we find splashes of more brilliant, reds, oranges, and greens. A certain dull, rust color is one of the French favorites, and they use it in masses, uninterrupted by other tones, or they employ it for trimming which it lends a most interesting color note.

Parisian designers are using a great deal of velvet for the winter models, and they cling to the soft, waving of downy and the thicker woolen fabrics, but they have done many interesting things with the serge and woolen crepes, with a number of them showing broadcloth as the very latest idea in the making of gowns and coats.

For evening the metal cloths are as good as ever, and while there is a good deal of brocade, it is not nearly so universally used as it was last season. Tulle and gauze are good, but mostly when they are combined with other materials.

Copy the Russian Blouse. Most of the jackets on the French tailors follow the lines of the Russian blouse, but the interpretation is so subtle that there are many dozens of expressions of the same idea. The little, bloused coats are held around their lower edges by twisted and corded belts, and insets with ends that dangle either at the side, at front or directly in the middle of the back.

Some of the Russian suits are modified and adjusted in very interesting fashion. For instance, a gray costume has a tiny jacket which ends at an extremely short length and falls over a continuation of its own line which fits the figure rather more closely and is made of brick-colored velours embroidered in gray. The whole gives the effect of a rather interesting lamp shade drooping over the crusted belt. Another costume suit has a skirt of black velvet and a loose sub-garment that is applied with black velvet figures, making altogether a Grecian design.

NOTHING LIKE IT IN WHOLE WORLD

That's What Scranton Woman Says of Tanicac—Entirely Restored
Health.

"There is nothing else like Tanicac in the whole world, and I shall certainly recommend it to everyone I see who is suffering like I did," said Mrs. T. Thornton, 1010 Ravine street, Scranton, Penna.

"For years I suffered from a general run-down condition, and was always pale, weak and sluggish. I lost my appetite, and at times even the sight of food made me sick. I just had to force down the little I did eat. I had headaches that almost drove me mad, and was so nervous that even the ticking of the clock worried me. At times, while doing my housework I would be overcome by a weak, trembly feeling, my knees would give way and I would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. I was simply in a miserable condition, and I hardly see how any person could suffer worse than I did."

"My first bottle of Tanicac gave me back my appetite, and after taking five bottles I am free from my troubles and enjoying good health. I eat three big meals every day, and haven't had a single headache since I began taking the medicine. I am no longer nervous and that weak feeling has entirely disappeared so that I can do all my housework with a light heart and with no difficulty. I feel strong and well now, better than I have since I was a girl, and I can never praise Tanicac enough for what it has done for me."

Tanicac is sold in Connelleville by Connelleville Drug Co., and by leading druggists everywhere. Advertisement

FADS ARE OLD AS PYRAMIDS

Mute Story Told by Mummies of Both Egypt and Peru in Field Museum.

Bobbed hair, concealed ears, short skirts and all the other fads and follies associated with modern women's styles are as old as the pyramids, according to the mute story told by the mummies of both Egypt and Peru in the Field Museum in Chicago.

Wrapped in their pitched shrouds, and "sacred" in "hieroglyphs" covered with curious paintings and hieroglyphs in colors still bright after 3,000 years or more, these mummies, all that was mortal of human bodies of ages ago, today link the present to a civilization long since dead.

The daily center of thousands of curious on-lookers, the mummies seem to hold a strange fascination for every visitor to the museum, they are silent spectators of the passing throngs, but the paintings which adorn their resting places tell more plainly than words of styles, customs and manners of a forgotten age.

"Why, are they dressed just like the girls we see on Michigan boulevard," exclaimed an aged visitor to his wife as they gazed at the strange figures adorning the sarcophagi. "It appears like they did not wear a bit more than they do now," the woman answered as the pair moved away.

It is a far cry from the Nile of Cleopatra's day to the Pacific coast of Peru in South America, but mummies from both regions, lying almost within reach of each other now, but in the ignorant of each other's existence, bear graphic evidence of the greatest similarity and proximity in many arts at a time when the Norsemen were ravaging all southern Europe and the Old World had almost sunk into barbarism.

IT IS SPORTING PROPOSITION

French Writer Explains Why Divorces Are More Common in America Than Elsewhere.

The sporting spirit expresses itself in every phase of America's untamed life. Marriage in the United States is a very different thing from what it is in France. It is a race for happiness if you wish; but each one races for himself alone.

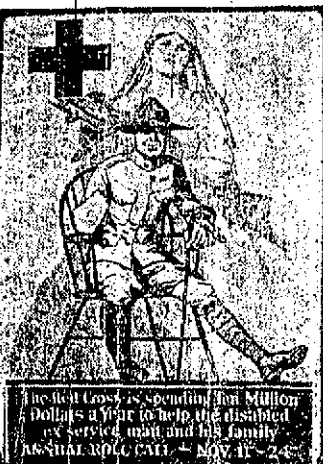

Sex competition supplants sex cooperation. Each party preserves his or her individual interest and freedom of opinion. There is little or no real intimacy, though much luxury—supplied, it is always understood, by the husband, writes Georges Liebenberg, in La Revue de Paris. But no matter how liberal the latter may be, his wife usually thinks, and often says,

Mr. Pickwick Discourses Anent Thanksgiving

"And I also maintain," he stily added, "as a result of my daily contact with the
